Purchase Rowland Farm
For Malton Airport

Although Ald. Croft insisted the property was not worth more than $6,500 and that the city at most should pay $8,500 for it, city council voted $12,300 for the 98-acre Rowland farm required for the Malton airport site. After arrangements had been made to go to arbitration, the assessment commissioner arranged a settlement at the figure approved by council.

Mayor Day pointed out that the property had been owned by the Rowland family for a hundred years and that it had a sentimental value which would be considered at an arbitration. Con. McNish reminded council that prices paid for 100-acre farms in the vicinity ranged from $12,000 to $18,000, and warned that arbitration proceedings might result in the city having to pay more for the property than the $12,300 recommended by the assessment commissioner.
